An Evening Echo.

"It is not difficult to keep out of war when nobody wishes to go to war with you."—SENATOR LODGE.

Indianapolis seems to have been right down glad to have Charley Hughes in her midst.

When Governor Hughes comes to West Virginia he will start a job which the colonel will finish when he arrives a week or so later.

Republican clubs are organizing in every county in the state, which is a necessary preliminary to make the victory in November thorough and complete.

Feeling the public pulse is a figure of speech which is by no means new in the case of Dr. Godby, the leading congressional candidate in the Charleston balliwick.

Looking 'em over as they are warming up for the tap of the bell, that Sutherland horse sure does have an easy, quiet, but ground-devouring stride. Looks like he would come in under the wraps.

Col. Jim Wier puts out a story that Governor Hatfield and Judge Robinson no longer speak as they pass by. Thus the great paramount issue of "Hatfieldism" dies by the hand of one who helped to create it.

The time is fast approaching when the Huntington Herald-Dispatch will start quoting back at its neighbor, the Advertiser, what the latter said about Chilton before Postmaster Dingess was forced out of the job and it was given over to appease Editor J. Harvey Long.

The Hampshire Prophet.

There was a man in our state—A prophet dark and glum—Who prophesied in nineteen four That if the corporations bore Their share of tax, no less, no more, We'd all be on the bum.

And when he saw that he was beat, With wondrous might and main, He got himself a little boss, He gave the coin another toss, And now he's tryin' to put across, The same old stuff again.

Behind the Times.

"Some talker," said a man in one of the Cornwell audiences the other day, as the Hampshire man rattled along about his 1904 prophecies of gloom and despair, "but 'pears to me he's just a little behind the times, aint he?"

"Yep," said the man next, "but you see he started out twelve years ago and he's just getting 'round again to the young fellows with the same old stuff."

Prophet's Last Day.

Cornwell daily reminds the people of West Virginia that his frothings of 1904 prove him to be a prophet.

His prophecy of 1904, if we remember rightly, was something about the danger of high cost of government and the building up of a political machine by the Republican party if his forebodings were not heeded. Now, then, Cornwell the prophet, can probably illumine the state on why it cost about $70,000 to run the Democratic county of Marion in 1915, and $650,000 in 1916.

It was a prophet, we believe, who read a certain handwriting on the wall—"Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting; thy days are numbered." The last day for Prophet Cornwell is November 7.

Most Original.

If Republicans were disposed to go into the household of the Democrats what a beauty of a running mate for Wilson would John J. Cornwell make!

Wilson's picture at the top of the poster, and underneath the likeness of the president all that vast array of criticism, exhortation and editorial assault which Cornwell's opponents copied from the Hampshire Review and circulated broadcast during the late Democratic primaries.

Even if this old Col. John T. McGraw, deposed Democratic national committeeman, the "original Wilson man" in West Virginia, Cornwell's attacks on the president would prove him beyond a doubt the most original Wilson man in West Virginia.

What Would the Children Say?

If the 300,000 public school children of West Virginia could understand the facts regarding the showing made by the Democrats and Republicans for the schools of the state, what would they say? Would they be willing to go back to a school term of four or five months, to have a poorly-trained, poorly-paid teacher, and to have unsanitary school houses without modern equipment?

The present conditions cannot be maintained and improved for our children without generous local support and substantial state aid. The much talked of economy is bound to mean parsimony toward our schools because most of our public money is spent in the interests of the boys and girls.

Cornwell's Slip.

Cornwell's slip at Sissonville has set the whole state to laughing. When he said "If there is any man in this audience who voted for Abe Lilly I warn you that they will attempt to get you back into the party."

That was the first time the Republicans of the state were aware of the Cornwell argument that Democrats who had voted for Gory Hogg and David E. French in the Democratic primaries were now all in the Republican party. If that isn't Cornwell's argument, his presumption is the greater, for it implies that "any" Republican who voted for Lilly is a Democrat now, while any Democrat who voted for Hogg or French could not possibly be a Republican now.

How the tone of thousands of voters in the state who voted for Attorney General Lilly must love that ego in the Hampshire editor!

Carranza Impatient.

"General" Carranza has grown decidedly impatient at the waste of time which is going on at New London. With considerable reluctance he consented to a conference and then instructed his delegates to discuss nothing but the withdrawal of American troops from Mexican territory, at least until an agreement on that point had been reached. Weeks have passed and no agreement on that point has been reached, and Carranza is strongly disposed to terminate the conference.

In an effort to avert this, from a Democratic standpoint, discussed El Paso Arredondo, Carranza's "designate," has come home to talk to the first chief, having induced Carranza to "recall" him for that purpose. Some of those who have been in close touch with the New London conference maintain that it is rapidly approaching dissolution.

The conference is, by the way, to transfer the scene of its labors to Atlantic City as it is believed the great seaside resort will afford more opportunities pleasantly to kill time, and as the United States pays all expenses there is no objection to the move.

Teachers Favored.

It seems likely that the teachers of West Virginia will soon be voting. The Republican party ought to come in for a large share of their support, for it has stood loyally by the teachers and schools through thick and thin. Under Republican rule teachers' salaries have been increased from $165 to $244. The last session of the legislature made it impossible for a teacher holding a first grade certificate to receive less than $50 a month, and made provisions whereby the richer districts may pay a salary much above this rate. For training of teachers, it established ten teacher-training high schools and gave them liberal state aid, and made large appropriations for current expenses and new buildings for our normal schools and state university.

The teachers should look over the list of progressive school laws passed by Republican legislatures, note the liberality of that party toward teachers' salaries and teacher-training, consider the demands of their profession for financial recognition in the future and then decide which party has a program best suited to their needs and ambitions.

Wilson Ashamed.

Speaking at Baltimore, President Wilson said, "The only thing I have been ashamed of in America is the fear and trembling of Americans in the presence of foreign competitors."

Possibly Mr. Wilson is to be congratulated that he feels no shame for his own fear and trembling in the presence of foreigners. But he should not censure American business men too severely. They realize that while Mr. Wilson is in control at Washington their foreign competitors may murder them in cold blood, torpedo the ships they travel on, outrage their wives and kill and mutilate their children with impunity; that the administration at most will merely write a note. They know that their foreign competitors may forfeit their property by unjust laws and decrees, as Carranza is doing now, and Mr. Wilson will probably defend and support the foreigner.

It is not recorded that American business men have shown fear or trembled before their foreign competitors. But if Mr. Wilson knows of an instance where they have, it certainly is not for him to misunderstand the reason or to censure them severely.

The Dummy Director Again.

It is practically certain that the policy of unlocking the directorates of national banks will fail to do the very thing which it was aimed to do. The unlocking boards were responsible for grave enough, but they were few in number. It was intended that no man or set of men could by large ownership in one bank dominate another. It was further intended that by isolating bank control it would be impossible for any man, however powerful, to know the extent of any other man's borrowings.

But inability of this or that individual to sit at the directors' table in this or that bank will correct neither of those evils, declares the Philadelphia Public Ledger. Unlocking directorates merely means that the principals will hereafter be represented by dummies.

Instead of the president of a bank being a director in three or a dozen others he will simply designate subordinates to serve for him. So it seems certain that any principal may in future get through his subordinates precisely the information which heretofore he may have acquired first hand for himself. There is nothing in the law to forbid a trust company from carrying its surplus deposits in any bank it sees fit to select. Therefore, the trust company, being in duty bound to its own shareholders and depositors to safeguard its own business, must see to it that it has a representative on the board of that national bank which holds so great a part of its cash. It has been the rule for presidents or chiefs to do that work of directing. Hereafter subordinates will have to do much of the work.

THE DAILY NOVELET

THE PLOT THAT FAILED.

Simon Simons, the meanest man in Pithsburg, felt that it was really time to give his fiancée a treat. He sat in the parlor indulging in free handholds every night for three weeks now, and he simply must take her out. While he was passing the opera house, he was dazzled by a brilliant idea. He inquired at the box office and was told that the house was sold out for the night, the biggest opera night in the history of the town.

"Oh, Luella," he said to Miss Duds, "What do you think of the idea of taking in the show at the opera house tonight? Caruso's going to sing 'Fiancé's a Man Again,' Geraldine Farrar's going to walk the tightrope, John McCormack's going to do a blackface turn with somebody named Al McGluck, and everything, I'm sure I ought to be able to get a couple of nice seats for $5 apiece, or maybe six, what do I care?"

After being coaxed for four-eighths of a second, Miss Duds consented to go, and Simon Simons telephoned on Miss Duds's phone to the Fordalino auto agency, asking that a car be sent to Miss Duds's address to give a prospective purchaser a sample ride. They rode in style down to the opera house, only to be informed that not a seat was to be had for cash or money.

"Curses," said Simon Simons vexedly. "Well, let's go to the movies."

But just then a well dressed man in a green derby stepped up with two tickets, explaining, "Glad to be able to help you out, pardner. My grandmothers down with the old infirmity paralysis and I can't take her out as I expected. You can have these two five dollar tickets for what they cost me."

Simon Simons paid, and then faintly so deeply that by the time he was revived the first act was over.

It is Highly Important to You That Your "Favorite Store" Should Be Adequately Advertised

As a patron of a store you have a very real interest in that store's advertising campaigns.

Your interest begins in the fact that through the store's advertising in the Telegram you are enabled to keep in constant touch with it—to know when it offers to you special buying opportunities, so that you can take prompt advantage of every economy opportunity which your "favorite store" provides for you.

But your interest in the advertising of your favorite store does not end here.

You know that the quality and quantity of a store's newspaper advertising determines the volume of business for that store. You know that a store which runs at its GREATEST CAPACITY, which makes the greatest possible "turn-over" of goods in a specified time, without materially increasing "over-head," or fixed, expenses, is in a position to accept the smallest profits on each sale.

It comes to this—that you are simply conserving your own interest in patronizing the stores that are most aggressively advertised. Not in all cases perhaps, but certainly in a majority of them, you will pay more for an article at the store which makes fewest sales of that article—assuming that it is an article of variable retail selling price. And logically, you will pay less for an article at the store which, through extensive advertising, is enabled to make the quickest "turn-overs," thus distributing the "profit-tax" over a very large number of sales, and thus lessening the necessary per-sale profit, while earning larger aggregate profits.

These considerations of undeniable FACTS make the advertising of your favorite store in the Telegram a thing of very personal interest to you.
